Are you looking for a career where you can provide geoscientific Geographic Information System (GIS) expertise while working with state-of-the-art software products? Where you can utilize your geoscience and information technology background, while growing your career in a team-oriented, dynamic and innovative organization?

We are looking for a professional to provide GIS expertise and related design, construction, and training support services to the Regional Manager and staff of the Resident Geologist Program (RGP) in Northwestern Ontario. You will design and construct mineral resource assessment maps, graphs, and other digital and hard copy products, electronically-derived maps for land use planning purposes, and reports, posters, displays, and presentations. Compiling geoscience data, information, and images, entering and verifying information in digital databases, and providing support and maintenance of the RGP Intranet and Internet websites will also be components of this role.

Qualifications: knowledge of and experience using GIS technology, including CAD, Arcview/Info-GIS, MapInfo, and GPS; knowledge of cartographic principles, practices, and techniques; demonstrated computer skills to provide website support and maintenance and database management support; knowledge of earth sciences terminology, including geoscience principles; analytical and investigative skills to conduct database searches for clients, interpret and address client requests, and to research and synthesize data/information/materials; established communication and interpersonal skills to tactfully and diplomatically provide detailed information and instructions, deal with confidential information, and respond to client requests and queries.
